In this explosive exposé, Fr. Neuhaus takes aim at the Vatican and its handling of the sex abuse scandal, revealing how the Church has been complicit in protecting predators and silencing victims.

In the wake of the devastating revelations of widespread sexual abuse and cover-up within the Catholic Church, Fr. Richard Neuhaus, a prominent American Catholic priest and theologian, has penned a scathing indictment of the Vatican and its leadership.

In his new book, Fr Neuhaus to Pope Benedict XVI: Conned!, Neuhaus argues that the Church has been systemically complicit in protecting predator priests and silencing their victims. He accuses the Vatican of a "culture of secrecy and impunity" that has allowed abuse to flourish and enabled the Church to avoid accountability.

Neuhaus, who died in 2009, was a close friend of Pope Benedict XVI and a respected voice within the Catholic Church. His book is based on decades of research and confidential interviews with Church officials, victims, and whistleblowers.

In the book, Neuhaus reveals that:

- The Vatican has been aware of the widespread sexual abuse of children by priests for decades, but has repeatedly covered it up.
- Church officials have often transferred abusive priests to new parishes, where they were able to continue to abuse children.
- The Vatican has silenced and intimidated victims who have come forward to report abuse.
- The Church has spent millions of dollars on legal settlements with victims, but has done little to prevent future abuse.

Neuhaus's book is a damning indictment of the Catholic Church's handling of the sex abuse scandal. It is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the extent of the problem and the Church's complicity in it.
